

A movie review

The BFG

The BFG is one of my favourite films which was filmed by Steven Spielberg and written by Roald Dahl. In the movie, a young girl sees a big, friendly giant who makes dreams for people. I think it is an exciting film because you will not know what will happen in the next second.

The BFG was released in 2016. The theme in the movie which is about dream catching is very novel and unique. This is a touching story with an amazing ending. I particularly love the friendship between BFG and Sophie as it proves that friendship is not about ages at all.

Among all the characters in the movie, I love the character BFG (David Mark Rylance Waters) the most as he is so nice, kind and cute. I think this role was played perfectly and I could really feel BFG's kindness.

Although this movie is fantastic, the pace of the movie is too fast. For example, after Sophie sees a picture of the Queen of England, she and BFG suddenly decide to see the Queen. I believe there could be more scenes and details added to the plot.

I have learned a lot from the movie. People should not quarrel but stay calm and communicate more with others. We should be brave when we encounter any difficulties. When I see someone do something wrong, I should step up and stop his actions. I highly recommend this movie to everyone!
