Green Story

A wicked witch came to my school and laughed, turning my school into a haunted house. Everyone was turned into ugly bald bats with tattered wings, except me, the wasteful troublemaker in the school.

A day before the witch showed up, I got a runny nose. I used plenty of tissues to wipe my nose. I threw them onto the ground in the classroom. 'Ah! That's disgusting! Stop it! Quickly put the used tissues into the rubbish bin,' said Peter resentfully. I ignored him and continued sneezing.

I had a Geography lesson an hour later. I was the last one to leave the classroom, so I had to turn off the air-conditioner, fans and lights. However, I forgot to turn off all of them. After the lesson, we went back to the classroom for rest. 'Wow! The classroom is cool!' Some of the classmates said in surprise. The class monitor screeched, 'Hey! Owen, it's a total waste of energy. You should've turned off the…' 'Are you listening to me?' She asked indignantly. 'Sometimes you're just annoying…' I whispered. 'What?' Amy exploded. Luckily, the English teacher arrived just in time to prevent a tragedy from happening.

We had to write a composition about saving energy at school. I made some mistakes on the paper, so I raised my hand to ask for another piece. After getting five sheets of paper, I still made a mistake so I asked for another sheet again. 'I'm not giving – Ah!' Miss Chen shouted. Suddenly, an ugly, old witch appeared. She caught Miss Chen with her nasty, long fingers. Everyone was dreaded. The witch caught my classmates one by one. She then turned them into bats. 'Thank you for wasting energy,' the witch laughed. 'I'll stay here forever and you. Let's have fun and waste more energy! The earth will soon be destroyed.'

I wish I had done more to save energy in CNEC. Now it's too late.
