

My Goals in Life

Although some of my goals varied from time to time, they, more or less, stayed the same over the years. While some of my goals can benefit society, others are just for my self-entertainment. Now, I'll talk about these goals and more about myself as a person.

My name is Heyvis and I study at CNEC Christian College. In my spare time, I like playing games and reading books since they can relieve my stress from school. My favourite subject is Integrated Science because ever since I was in primary school, I have always had a fascination of how the world around us works. Discovering our world is intriguing.

With all of this information, you might be asking what my dream job is. Do I want to be a scientist? Do I want to be an engineer? Well, I actually want to be a doctor. In my opinion, being a doctor is meaningful, I can cure patients who have life-threatening injuries or find cures to existing diseases so future generations will not have to suffer as much as we do. Overall, it's such a good thing to do as you can serve society or even benefit mankind as a whole.

I think it's also safe to say that most of us have something we want to accomplish before we pass into the other realm. My goal is rather unusual though, and that is to read all the pieces of literature written by Stephen King, a famous horror novel writer. His novels are filled to the brim with thrilling, scary and emotional moments, he can make your emotions turn 180° in a matter of sentences. He is such a great writer that I hope I could be him but this is just only in the realm of possibilities.

I hope that this sharing can inspire you to make your own life goals or give motivation to those who do. All I can say is, keep your head up high and you can overcome all your problems.
