

Dearest Diary,

Oh, Diary, I've been humming 'Give thanks with a grateful heart...' whole day! it's almost the Thanksgiving Day! I will eat a turkey on that day! Wait, Thanksgiving is not just about eating, but the most important thing is to thank someone. Hmm...

Oh, yes! I want to thank my dad the most! Diary, do you know he is so conscientious and works hard for the family? He is the only man in family, so, of course, he needs to work for supporting the family expense. Not just on weekdays! Even at the weekends! He wants us to live a better life, so he works two more days of part-time work. Because of the extra money, we can have a big meal on every weekend! Sounds good, right? This is all because of his hard work!

Not just that, my dad understands me a lot. Last week, I stayed in my bedroom for a long time reciting new words. When I came out, my mum was furious because I didn't bring any notes and assumed I hadn't been studying at all. I dared not say anything as she was so angry. At that time, my dad suddenly asked me the meanings of some vocabulary items that I just revised. I told him the correct answer. After reciting seven to ten words, my mum finally believed that I had been studying in the bedroom. Diary, don't you think my dad is a lifesaver?

Moreover, my dad attaches great importance to my study. I was once doing some Math exercises which were very difficult. Although my dad is good at Maths, he didn't know how to finish a question. But he didn't give up and studied for this lesson by himself after finishing his job. Oh, my goodness! He spent one hour studying and teaching me! If it hadn't been for my dad, I would've been so lost and clueless! I am very grateful for having such a patient father who is so willing to learn!

Although there are so many people that I want to thank, the most important person is my dad. I've learnt to be more responsible, understanding and helpful. I'll work hard and repay for his hard work! Bye for now, Diary!

Love,

Kingsley
