Hey! Guys, welcome to my blog! I am Carson! Have you been to Bangkok? Regardless of your answer, I will now tell you about my fantastic trip to Bangkok last month with my family. Sounds fun, right? Put down all of your work and admire this place immediately!

It is the playing scene during Water Festival.

During the three days, we visited various tourist destinations and learnt more about the culture of Bangkok. Fortunately, the date we visited there was on the last day of Water Festival, the grandest festival in Bangkok. People spill water at each other and even tourists cannot be excepted. I was as drenched as a man who just went swimming after I walked along the street. But it was still a superb experience!

We also visited many destinations. As the Thai believe in many gods, they have built many temples to worship them. This is the landmark of Thailand. We visited many temples such as Phro Phrom and Wat Pho. It was a solemn and silent place where we are not allowed to chat or play. We also went to Grand Palace. It is an incredible palace as its name suggests. The dazzling, magnificent and spectacular palace is also undoubtedly the landmark of Thailand. You will regret not seeing this palace during the journey.

It's the fascinating Grand Palace.

It's important to spend time going shopping in Bangkok especially in the sea market. Iconsian is a water market combined with a department store. The traffic there is convenient, as you can go there by many ways of transportation. Inside the mall are many famous shops and restaurants and even a cinema. It is such a heaven for every woman who likes shopping. But if you want to buy souvenirs, Chatuchak Weekend Market is your best choice. There are 15,000 shops in the market. The price of the commodities was unimaginatively low. We bought numerous things from there.

The food in Bangkok is very famous. We went to a restaurant called Bangkok Kaen Pa. We ordered Som Tum, Ton Yum Kung. I love Som Tum very much because it tastes sour and spicy. It was a good appetizer. When I added some fish sauce, it became more fantastic. Ton Yum Kung is the food which I had wanted to taste for a long time. However, when I drank a spoonful of it, I found that it was too spicy. I almost spat it on the ground. My face became a red apple and coughed for a minute. After eating something irritating, I ate some sweet food to calm myself down. I ordered a mango sticky rice, one of the well-known foods in Thailand.

It was an unforgettable and entertaining trip. We not only experienced something exciting, but also learnt the religion and history of Bangkok. It is Ton Yum Kung. I suggest you prepare a bottle of water before you try to drink it.
