

Title: Answer by the chalk!

Everyone has their first time doing something new, and it was my first time answering my teacher's questions by writing on the blackboard! I could still remember how fearful and nervous I was. Writing with chalk was a novel experience for me at that time. It was also quite difficult since controlling the movement of chalk was a tough mission for a primary one kid. Every time when I saw this photo, I could recall the excitement and joy on the first day of school. What would I encounter in the "school"? Were my classmates passionate and adorable for me to make friends with? Meanwhile I was afraid of the "school" as to me, there was a myriad of strangers and unknown people. Where were my parents? Why were there so many big adults calling themselves "teachers"? What is a teacher? Fortunately, my class teacher was a gentle young lady who comforted my fear. She asked students to write something on the chalkboard to introduce themselves, no matter whether they were pictures or words. I could draw anything I liked, planning how I could tell others who I am. My primary life was full of happiness since I had no anxieties and worries about tomorrow, which is totally opposite to my recent days. But perhaps I should stop overthinking and worrying too much as the future is full of infinite possibilities. I should trust my capabilities as the "chalk" to plan my future on the blank board is in my hand, creating who I am going to be.

Title: Precious friendship!

Friendship is surely one of the most precious and vital things in the world! This photo was taken by me recently, in a school programme, in which my teammates and I enjoyed ourselves immensely. We cooperated with each other to accomplish the missions given by the senior form students. We endeavoured to do our best, contributing huge efforts to a patchwork of great teamwork! We joined our hands together with a big grin on our faces when we finished the games. Although we were tired and exhausted after the events, we found them meaningful as we learned the significance of friendship and teamwork. Overcoming difficulties together, we were equipped with better communication and problem-solving skills. Linking and bonding with others are undeniably essential and enjoyable for humans. Joining our hands, we become a stronger and better self together with one and other.