

Dear Diary,

Thanksgiving, which I really look forward to, is coming soon. 'Who would be the person I am going to write a thank-you card to?' is the question I've been asking myself today. The person I've been thinking of is my mum.

My mum is not only conscientious, but also caring. She works very hard for the family. One day, I was hurt and broke my leg. My mother rushed to the hospital immediately from her company and cared about my injuries. She stayed in the hospital for one night because she was afraid that my condition would worsen. Although she was exhausted, she still took care of me. I am very grateful to have such a caring mother.

My mother is also very loving. I sometimes make mistakes accidentally, for example, I accidentally broke a bowl yesterday, but she didn't blame me, instead she cared about me in the first place. I think this is the perfect example of maternal love.

I think Mum works so hard. I should make a change and help her to take care of our family just like how she takes care of me. I've learned from her to be caring and considerate to everyone.

Happy Thanksgiving, Mom! Time to sleep, Diary. Good night!

Love,

Maxton
