Embrace your dream, young people

Why young people need to pursue dreams

As the popular phrase “YOLO” says, you only live once. Holding tight this valuable chance, instead of spending your time doing something you never feel thrilled about, passing days and nights following the same routine, and living a monotonous and boring life, why don’t we choose to step out of our comfort zone to pursue things we dream to accomplish, and fill our lifetime with joy and satisfaction. Without the invention of time machines, it is always impossible to know when our life will come to an end, or what will happen in our future. The mist in front of us on our life path may seem frightening, deterring us from stepping forward, but the path is still long before it ends, and we are still young, a why don’t we give ourselves a chance and make strides to enlarge our border? Be brave to pursue the life we desire for, to pursue the joy we dream of, to pursue excitement and success we yearn for.

What prevents them from daring to dream

Everyone in society, be they males or females, the youngsters or the elderly, should all have things and lifestyles they desire for. But reality is never a fairy tale or utopia, few can enjoy strolling along a smooth path to success, living a life with a happy ending. There are too many hurdles and obstacles on our runway of life, which are difficult, if not impossible to overcome, for example, the financial burden. Money plays a vital and irreplaceable role in our life. Most young adults, who just enter society, struggle hard to make ends meet, not to mention pursuing their dreams. Apart from the difficulty to maintain daily lives, the objection and disapproval from their beloved ones may also block their way to pursue dreams. Being overwhelmed by pressure, young people do not dare to dream in the cruel reality.

My tips for people who want to pursue their dreams.

Although there may be obstacles everywhere on your bumpy road while you are chasing after your dream, it is not a mission impossible. To make your journey easier, here are some tips for you. First, you should know what it requires to pursue your dream, plan the time you need to spend on what action you have to take, etc. For example, you should spend time on learning different languages if you aspire to be a reporter travelling around the world to expose your readers to controversial international news and interesting feature stories. Setting clear goals and managing your time well to achieve them allows you to prevent meeting unexpected obstacles on your journey. Secondly, don't be afraid to give your aspiration a go. "Failure is the mother of success." There is no need to hesitate and stop your pace due to the fear of failure, as it brings you experiences, and builds the path leading to success for you. Even if the ending may not be a total success, the process is worthy. The journey for pursuing your dream is just like a long run, it may be hard on the way towards the finishing point. You may not be able to reach the final point within a short period of time, but at least you are gaining valuable experiences, you are enjoying the gorgeous view on your trip, and all these are priceless.
