

Have you ever been to Singapore? I think some of you might answer 'yes'. However, my trip to Singapore is special - I went to Singapore with my teachers and classmates! We went there just last month. Below are some of the famous places you might want to visit.

China Town there, called 'Ngu Che Shui', is the biggest market I've ever seen! Long time ago, Guangdong and Fujian people came to Singapore and brought their cultures to Singapore. Later, Singaporeans built a market which sold Chinese things. That market is now China Town. Just when I was stepping inside the market with my friends, massive kinds of sparkly things caught our eyes - clips, potteries, stamps, etc, were everywhere. It was really difficult to choose only one souvenir to bring home! Finally, I choose a beautiful snow dome.

The next place you should visit is the 'Gardens by the Bay' on Marina Bay. There are three parts: the 'Flower Dome', the 'Cloud Forest', and the 'OCBC Skyway'. First we entered 'Flower Dome'. It was an amazing sight with lots and lots of spectacular flowers in it. There were all sorts of flowers I've never seen before. Blue, bell-shaped flower, butterfly shaped flowers and so on, were everywhere. I was amazed by the sight. Then, we went to the 'Cloud Forest'. You might think it's a forest filled with clouds, right?

Not exactly. When I was opening the door of the entrance, cool mist almost blocked my sight entirely. There is a waterfall running like a non-stop tap opposite the entrance. Strange trees fill every corner. There are even cacti there! Trees swirl and tangle with other trees, making a mysterious sight. Lastly, we walked on the ‘OCBC’ Skyway’. It was built on environmentally friendly trees which have solar energy systems on them. I was glad I’m not afraid of height! Some people were shaking and running across the ‘skyway’ as fast as they could. I was enjoying the sight of the sea and the land opposite of us when the tour guide said we had to leave. How sad! I hope I can go there again next time.

Are you interested in these places after I’ve introduced them and shared my experiences? I think most of you would! Why don’t you go to Singapore to visit those places next time? I’m sure you’ll love it! I’ll share my experience gained from other new places next time!
